The National Resources Mobilisation Act Reviewed

Officials of the National War Service Department report gratifying and ready response from young Canadians being called for military training under the National Resources Mobilisation Act.

They state, however, that while each man receives a mailed individual and personal notice of his call to training, as his period arrives, a number of enquiries are still being sent direct to Ottawa. Major-General LAFriche, Associate Deputy Minister of the Department of National War Service, under whose direction the mobilization of trainees is being carried out, points out that the Regulations have been planned to smooth out possible difficulties for the trainee by dividing Canada into thirteen Administrative Divisions, with officials and headquarters offices in each Division, authorized to handle procedure and operations locally.

To the Divisional Registrar of National War Service in the area in which they are registered should be forwarded all communications concerning business arising from the provisions of National War Service Regulations. All men from 19 to 45 are warned that notification must also be given promptly of change of address or marital status. Failure to do so incurs the risk of fine or imprisonment.

Young men in this area liable for military training, requiring further information regarding their obligations or applications for postponement should communicate with the Divisional Registrar for this District, whose name and address are given below for their convenience, along with the names of other Members of the Board:

Division "N." Headquarters—Edmonton, Alta.
Chairman of the Board: Honourable Horace Harvey, Chief Justice, Edmonton, Alta.

Members of the Board: Mr. Simon Fox, Barrister, Stettin, Alberta; Mr. R. J. Dinning, 205 Canadian Bank of Commerce Building, Edmonton, Alta. Divisional Registrar: Mr. J. P. McIsaac, Court House, Edmonton, Alta. This Division comprises the electoral districts of Acadia (210), Athabasca (211), Battle River (212), Bow River (213), Calgary East (214), Calgary West (215), Camrose (216), Edmonton East (217), Edmonton West (218), Jasper-Edson (219), Lethbridge (220), Medicine Hat (221), Medicine Hat (222), Peace River (223), Red Deer (224), Vegreville (225), Wetaskiwin (226), and the district of MacKenzie.

Crested Wheat Grass And Perennial Weeds

It is difficult to establish crested wheat grass among perennial weeds and grasses than annual and biennial weeds. Favorable results, however, can be expected from this practice in good year, especially if the grass is seeded in the fall, says Dr. H. H. Henrich, Dominion Experimental Station, Swift Current, Sask.

The chief perennial weeds found on lands where regressing is most urgent are: pasture sage, prairie sage, golden rod, velvet dock, wild rose and buckbrush.

The most common grasses found on abandoned lands are: blue joint, and drooping, sweet grass and wild barley. On over-grazed pastures the grasses that persist are mostly blue grama grass and hardy sedges. The latter are not true grasses but are commonly referred to as such.

Widespread observations have shown that many of the perennial species disappear soon after the crested wheat grass has become established, while others persist among the grass and may remain dominant. To study competition in detail, permanent plots were laid down and mapped as part of the work carried on by the forage division of the Dominion Experimental Station at Swift Current. Pasture sage, which grows on all types of soils and is prevalent on over-grazed pastures as well as on abandoned lands, is readily crowded out by crested wheat grass. Three years after seeding little pasture sage remained on the fields, except where the stand of grass was thin. Prairie sage prefers heavier soil types and is somewhat more persistent, but even it is being controlled effectively by crested wheat grass.

The various species of goldenrod react somewhat differently. Some species are more persistent than others. None, however, can maintain a

Last Rites Held For Mrs. Wm. Arkwright

The respect and esteem in which Mrs. Arkwright (Aunt Sally to all who knew her) was shown by the large congregation present to pay their last respects to the beloved old lady.

Interment took place in Wainwright cemetery. McLeod's Paviors were in charge of arrangements.

Charles Abernethy Laid To Rest

Charles Abernethy, who was killed last week when he fell from an oil-drilling derrick in the Vermilion district, was laid to rest in Wainwright cemetery on Thursday afternoon, July 17th. Services were held from St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church here, and were conducted by Rev. L. M. Watts.

A large congregation of sorrowing friends and relatives expressed their sympathy at Mr. Abernethy's untimely passing, and the sympathy of the entire community is extended to his bereaved family.

Paul bearers were: Messrs E. Gaudet, R. Hartling, E. Wilson, J. Winters, E. Reid and W. Seutings. Arrangements were in the charge of McLeod's Funeral Parlors.

vigorous growth in competition with crested wheat grass.

Three to four years after seeding, it can be expected that these weeds will be almost completely controlled. Vined dock, very prevalent on drifting, sandy, abandoned lands, is easily crowded out by crested wheat grass. However, since this weed creeps into drifting dunes and finally establishes a cover, it is not advisable to seed such areas down until the weed has provided protection for the grass seedlings.

Roses and buckbrush shade the young seedlings and offer serious competition. Among a thin stand of these plants, the grass can be established and has a fair chance of survival. However, if the stand is very thick it is wasteful to seed among these weeds. Where a stand of grass has been established, mowing the roses and buckbrush will give the grass a good chance to survive.

With native grasses, competition becomes more intensive. They are usually well adapted to the location where they grow and constitute a more or less permanent form of vegetation. Crested wheat grass competes very favorably with wild barley and generally little will remain of this species after three years. Blue joint, sweet grass, blue grama grass and sedge are much more persistent. They are seldom completely crowded out but studies have shown that where these grasses and sedges are growing together, the crested wheat grass continues to increase year by year while the cover of native species remains stationary or decreases.

Western Chief Grooms Prime Minister

During his Western inspection tour Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King was greeted in Regina by two full-blooded Indian Chiefs of the Peapoot Reserve in the Qu'Appelle Valley. He is shown here examining a Great War decoration proudly worn by Chief Harry Ball, who served with the 105th Regiment and lost a leg at Vimy Ridge. Chief Abel Watsch (centre) was also a private with the 190th and was gassed at Hill 70 in 1917. Mr. King joined the Chiefs in smoking the pipe of peace after inspecting the all-Indian platoon of this platoon came from the Peapoot Reserve and are following the Great War example of their chiefs.

Large Crowd Attends Wainwright Stampede

On Wednesday last, the first Stampede that Wainwright has had for some time took place at the Fair Grounds. An exceptionally large crowd gathered from all over Central and Eastern Alberta to witness some of the rough-and-tumble and most brilliant cowboys do their stuff.

On the grounds were booths and concessions which all added to the fun of the fair. Ice cream and pop were sure in order as the weather was hot. It was so hot that even the announcer forgot his job and whistled—and immediately the crowd at large knew he was thirsty!

According to the sponsors the affair was very successful in every way, and especially, financially, for the Red Cross.

Winners in the various events were as follows:

- Broke Saddle Riding
 - 1st—Bob Lander, Black Diamond.
 - 2nd—Frank Brown, Black Diamond.
 - 3rd—J. Maltais, Dubery.
 - Barrel Race
 - 1st—Frank Voss, Hardisty.

Less Stringent Physical Requirements For Air Recruits...

Day by day the Royal Canadian Air Force grows bigger—in many ways. More schools are coming into operation, aircraft for training are being supplied in increasing numbers.

Now the expansion is being applied to the recruits themselves. Taller and heavier men will be noted in the aircrew enlistments of the near future.

Regulations just announced set new maximum heights and weights for Wireless Operators (air gunners), Air Gunners, Pilots and Observers, as well as airmen for ground duties.

Air Force authorities consider it probable that many candidates who applied prior to the recent amendments respecting height and weight and who were found unacceptable at that time, may now fulfill requirements, provided they are qualified in other respects.

For the information of young Canadians eager to enter the Air Force and who may consider themselves ineligible, following are the new regulations:

- (a) The maximum height and weight for Wireless Operators (air gunners) and Air Gunners are now as follows:
 - (1) Maximum height, 6 feet, three inches.
 - (2) Maximum weight, 210 pounds.
- (b) The maximum height and weight for Pilots and Observers are as follows:
 - (1) Maximum height, six feet, three inches.
 - (2) Maximum weight, 210 pounds.
- (c) The minimum height for Airmen for ground duties is five feet, two inches, except in the class of skilled tradesmen, who are acceptable at a minimum height of five feet. There is no maximum.
- (d) The minimum weight acceptable for Airmen for ground duties is 105 pounds for those five feet in height; 108 pounds for those five feet one inch in height; 111 pounds for those five feet two inches in height; 113 pounds for those five feet three inches in height.

Not long ago arrangements were announced whereby the Canadian Legion Educational Services are prepared to provide facilities for the pre-enlistment education of keen young men, qualified in all other respects other than educational for enlistment in the R.C.A.F. for training as Pilot, Observer, or Wireless Operator (air gunner).

Information respecting such courses is available at Recruiting Centres in No. 4 Training Command including Provincial Buildings, Edmonton.

The combination of new regulations respecting physique and educational facilities is expected to open the doors for many prospective airmen.

OVERLORD OF THE BATTLEFIELD

Tank Designers Create Irresistible Shock Power From 1916 'Big Willie'

CANADIAN ARMOURD CORPS
FIGHT IN CUSHIONED COM-FORT COMPARED TO ORIGINAL
"IRON COFFINS" — IMPROVE-MENT IN TANKS MATCHES
AIRPLANE'S NEW EFFICIENCY

The following is the second in a series of articles dealing with Canada's new Armoured formations.

No single weapon in the history of military science has matched the tank's rapid and irrevocable revolution of future armies and their tactics. Gun powder did it, but the cannon was 1,000 years in accomplishing the complete transformation which the tank has achieved in a quarter-century.

Born to defeat the entrenched machine-gun, which had given such strength to the defence that deadlocked the 1914-18 battlefield, the tank not only did so but even gave the machine gun mobility. It had more than reversed the formidable cost of attack before the war was over. Through development of the armour-plated weapon and its tactical adaptation, armies based on caterpillar wheels and gasoline have been given unprecedented speed, range and hitting strength. They have too much power for the defence—and the tank is thus the ruthless overlord of the modern battlefield.

Almost Still-born

Nor has any other innovation to modern arms undergone a more painful process of the experimental road towards adoption as a military instrument. The tank was almost still-born; it was close to death several times before it could creep. It was nearly abandoned before plans reached the factory stage; and it was then forced through crisis after crisis on the Western front before it was seriously accepted as a weapon. Its sponsors had to surmount scorn, ridicule and disparagement as well as their unorthodox war-engine's mechanical failures and defections in design.

But from the uncertain surges and dubious waddle of the 30-ton monstrosities of 1916, which bogged down, broke down, were filled with faults, and whose crews were almost blind in their iron-coffins, have come today's swift, efficient and tremendously powerful shock-units which can crash through and sweep over, or pierce by narrow thrusts, an old-style infantry force of many times their strength in man-power. From floundering "Big Willie," the original Mark 1 Tank of 1916, have come the efficient tanks of the armoured formations which are the elite corps of the battlefield.

There has been, literally, a sane substitution of machines for men in offensive operations. The tank is no longer just a secondary weapon in an infantry assault; the skilled soldier-technicians who man the heavy infantry tanks of the tank brigades, and the fast cruisers of the armoured division, are this war's shock troops. Their machines take the brunt of the defensive fire. The hitting strength of an armoured unit is estimated from its fighting vehicles, not its man-power.

There is nothing in the Canadian soldier's equipment which is so improved in performance as the tank. Nothing has been left undone to perfect the tank's dependability, communication, vision, accuracy of fire and "crew comfort."

Cantankerous Contraptions

The first tanks, which were secretly built in a plant at Telford, England, and then tested, and their crews trained, in a forbidden "explosive area" on Lord Ivesagh's estate in Norfolk, were such cantankerous contraptions that almost any change was an improvement. Their 106 horse power, six-cylinder engines balked, the driving bands failed, the caterpillar tracks slipped; they would not wade through deep water, rough ground shocked them with frightful jars and shudders, and their laborious crawl was even slower than the infantryman's 50 feet-per-minute walk. But they knocked down obstructions with a terrible nonchalance. That clearly foretold how they would crush resistance in trench warfare.

Ancient War-Carts

The history of the tank could start deep in the mists of military anti-

LABOR PAY HIGHER THAN PHYSICIANS'

The Journal of the American Medical Association says, "The highest rate of pay given appears to be that for a bricklayer who is a skilled foreman. He receives $1.79 an hour. Next comes an iron and steel worker, who gets $1.65 an hour and after that an ordinary bricklayer who gets $1.62 per hour.

There are still some other occupations which are more remunerative than that of the physician such as marble setter and polisher at $1.90 an hour and plasterer at $1.55 an hour.

In the next group come the doctors. Among those who are allowed $1.01 an hour are the air-compressor operator, the power-shovel operator, the dredge operator, the pump and roller operator, the architect, the statistician, the lawyer and the physician.

All of the foregoing reminds us of a friend who worked in New York during the summer season as a carpenter to gain sufficient money to allow him to attend the medical school in autumn and winter. He was no great carpenter but he drew $11.00 a day all through the season. Finally he was graduated, spent a year in Bellevue as interne and then put up his shingle. He was barely able to live on his income during the first year, so he went back to carpentering until he had saved enough money to enable him to carry on until practice improved.

Under present circumstances it takes six years of college and from three to five years more of post-graduate study before a young man or woman feels sufficiently qualified to begin the practice of medicine. Then he or she has to find the practice. Why not be a bricklayer foreman?

AN EASY DECISION

Motor car drivers in Canada are now free to face with the fact that the armies of the Empire need the gasoline which Canadians are using for pleasure purposes.

For several months past every loyal Canadian has been nursing the fervent wish that the young flyers from Canada with their brother fighters in the R.A.F. could pay back ten-fold the unspeakable horrors which Nazi airmen have unleashed in the British Isles. Now finally the wings of hundreds of Empire planes are casting their shadows over Germany daily. The hour has come when we have the opportunity to shake the morals of Hitler's millions.

But as each new flight of aeroplanes streak into battle, and as the Empire increases its raiding groups from a handful of attackers to waves of machines which are counted by the hundreds, fuel for these fighting ships stands out as the stark need of the hour.

From London comes the urgent cry: "Give us all the gasoline you can spare."

Canada cannot turn over all her gasoline. That product is vital in our huge production of war material. We need large quantities for the hundreds of air attacking E.T.A.O. droids of air training ships across the country, for the navy and the convoys which touch our shores, for the transportation of war goods. But there is one way in which we can supply more and more gasoline for the fighters—by refusing to use up gasoline unnecessarily in private motor cars.

Millions upon millions of gallons of gasoline are spent every year in private motor cars for purposes which may be considered unnecessary in the light of the drastic need across the Atlantic.

If our fighting forces are to get any help at all from Canada, in so far as gasoline is concerned, fuel experts declare, then owners of private motor cars must reduce their consumption of gasoline by at least 50 per cent. Armed with this knowledge who of us is going to refuse to cooperate? The decision is an easy one.

PAY THE PREMIUM

Apart from the natural beauties that are an ever-present lure and attraction to tourists in Canada, the premium on United States dollars is the greatest possible aid to promotion of traffic from that country. In terms of dollars, it provides a bonus of ten per cent. One enterprising group has pictured it as "one day free in ten." To others, it is a pleasing novelty.

For any one of these conceptions to be effective, the premium must be paid by the Canadians catering to the tourist. It is not only a national service to pay the premium, paramount in wartime, but it is the law as well. It is an offence punishable by severe penalties, to accept United States currency at anything other than the official rate.

Because Canada is in urgent need of United States dollars to buy airplanes and other vital war equipment in the U.S.A., this American currency should be turned in to the banks without undue delay. It is an offence to hold it for more than a reasonable period of a few days after it has been received.

No Canadian loses by payment of the premium. Merchants, hotel-keepers and others pay the current premium of ten per cent and the banks pay out a like premium in receiving the American currency. The premium is ten per cent, whether it be for U.S. paper currency, bank cheques or travellers' cheques or silver.

It is a national service and a patriotic duty—PAY THE TOURIST HIS PREMIUM.

NEW STYLES IN TILES

In these days of prefabricated housing, paint and wood chemistry is contributing in no small way to the beauty of the interior decoration of these one-day-to-build houses with a product that is new to the Canadian building trade—stimulated tiling, according to an article by Philip A. Novikov in the current issue of the C.I.L. Oval.

Basically, this tiling comes from the forests of Canada and the manufacturers of this new material have overcome all the deficiencies of real tile and have actually improved upon it in many ways. Its main constituent is made of oil-treated steam-burst wood fibre, molded into standard boards under terrific pressure. When the surface of the boards has been made perfectly smooth it is ready for the application of a top coat of specially prepared enamel, which comes in some 20 color variations covering practically all the popular tints used in modern interior decoration. While it is still in greatest demand for bathrooms—a habit probably acquired when porcelainizing tiling seldom came in any other color.

In addition to being used for tiling bathrooms this new material is quickly gaining favor in the decoration of modern kitchens and hallways. Restaurants are utilizing the plain-surfaced product for their lunch counters as well as using the scored product for outside fronts. It is taking the place of enamelled sheet metal, which has a tendency to become chipped and rusted in the course of a year or two, in the manufacture of commercial signs, the designs and lettering being transferred to it by decalcomans or silk screening. Of special interest is its use in the manufacture of serving trays which are impervious to boiling water, alcohol or any other liquid that may be accidentally spilled during a house party.

WORLD'S WEEK

BY HAROLD L. WEIR

Associate Editor of the "Edmonton Bulletin" and author of the daily column "From the News."

The French occupation of Syria, sanctioned by the League of Nations at the San Remo conference of 1920, came to an enforced end last week, but the repercussions continue to shake Anglo-French relations.

It was a curious business. Vichy Frenchmen closed their fists at the loss of Syria, but at the same time uttered sighs of relief at the end of the bloodshed.

The diplomatic incidents leading up to the surrender of Syria, but were some of the most despicable during this war.

Having stymied the Vichy crowd by proposing draconian terms for peace, the British were finally more lenient when soldiers took up the armistice negotiations after Vichy had left the matter up to General Dentz. Vichy maintained a firm attitude and at the same time avoided additional loss of life by giving General Dentz a free hand to accept most of the terms that the government felt it could not accept itself.

The armistice terms comprised only military clauses. Political ones, like French admission of the end of the Syrian mandate and the turning over of German and Italian citizens to the British, were omitted.

The Vichy won one point which it had stipulated:

No de Gaulleists were official partners in the contract, although General Georges Catroux, Free French commander in the Levant was present at the signing at St. Jean d'Acre. Practically speaking, the military clauses will have political results because France's Syrian mandate definitely comes to an end whether Vichy has admitted it in writing or not.

The fact that the military conditions of the armistice were honorable was credited to the stubborn resistance of General Dentz. All Vichy troops were given honors of war, and will be repatriated on French convoys if they so desire.

The dangerous question of these troops joining the forces of General Charles de Gaulle has been settled. Instead of admitting the right of the soldiers to join de Gaulle as units, General Dentz has obtained agreement that both civilians and soldiers will be treated individually.

Furthermore, the British have agreed that even pro-Vichy French may remain in Syria if their work makes it necessary.

The only Frenchmen who will be retained as prisoners will be equivalent in numbers and rank with British officers and men shipped off to France 15 days ago.

What will be the eventual results of the Franco-British Syrian agreement remains a mystery, insofar as relations between the two nations are concerned.

Neither Vichy nor London will feel inclined to be more tender towards each other because of it. That much is certain.

For many Frenchmen, Syria may replace Fashoda as a symbol. Fashoda, a town on the White Nile, was occupied by a French expedition in July, 1898, but surrendered to the British in November of the same year.

Apart from these considerations, the Syrian war has had far less tragic results than might at first have been anticipated. Britain was clever enough to localize the conflict.

France was clever enough to refuse German and Italian aid which would have enlarged the conflict and added fuel to the fire of disunion.

So far as the French are concerned, ed, Turkey remains a riddle. Observers are convinced that that country has received certain definite promises as a price for her strict neutrality.

How these promises will combine with the independence of that touchy country, Syria, remains to be seen. Turkey now becomes an even more convenient corridor for both belligerents in the greater war.

It may pay to watch Turkey as the scene of startling developments within the course of the next few weeks.

Extract from Paragraph 3 of Proclamation.

Men designated in the foregoing are further required

"To submit themselves for medical examination and to undergo military training for a period of four months within Canada or the territorial waters thereof, and to report at such places and times and in such manner and to such authorities or persons as may be notified to them respectively by a Divisional Registrar of an Administrative Division."

Extract from Paragraph 4 of Proclamation.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS

designed to facilitate equitable conditions of mobilization

Deferring of Training Periods to Avoid Individual Hardship

If the Board is satisfied that the calling out of any man for military training will cause extreme hardship to those dependent upon such man, the Board may, from time to time, postpone the training period of the man; Provided that such man shall apply for a postponement order in accordance with the provisions of subsection one of section ten of the regulations.

Postponement Applications Must be Made in Writing

No application for a postponement order may be made otherwise than in writing, by the man called out, to the Divisional Registrar who issued the "Notice—Medical Examination" and within eight clear days of the date appearing on such notice.

Any person who appears before a Board shall do so at his own expense.

War Industry and Seasonal Occupations given Consideration

In the national interest, applications for postponement of training of key men engaged in war industries, or in essential occupations, may be addressed to the Divisional Registrar concerned.

Eligible Men Must Not Leave Canada without Authority

No male British subject who is liable to be called out for military training shall, after his age class has been called out by proclamation, leave Canada, for any reason whatsoever, unless and until he has been so authorized in writing by the Chairman of the Board to whose jurisdiction such man is subject.

Eligible men must notify authorities immediately of change of address or marital status

If you are a single man or childless widower between the ages of 19 and 45 and if you change your address, or if you marry, you must immediately notify THE NATIONAL WAR SERVICES DIVISIONAL REGISTRAR IN THE DIVISION IN WHICH YOU ARE REGISTERED

If you do not know the name and address of your Divisional Registrar, ask at your local post office. Failure to comply with this requirement may subject you to a fine or imprisonment.

CIVIL RE-EMPLOYMENT

Provision has been made for the reinstatement of men in their positions of employment, after their periods of training or service, under conditions that will facilitate their re-entry to civilian life.

RENDEZ-VOUS IN VIENNA

BY LESLIE HAMILTON

CHAPTER NINE

Partners in Conspiracy

"Has there been any change in the situation with respect to the house in St. Joseph's?" Rex enquired, discussing their plans later on. "Is it merely closed up, I mean, as Felix told me he believed to be the case?"

"There is no change as far as the closed up part of it is concerned, but it's now under constant observation as well, since they dropped the close watch upon myself," Olga advised him. "Incidentally, speaking of my former guard also reminds me that it's time I was making my daily report. Twelve o'clock is the deadline."

"Right," Munroe agreed. "And while you're attending to that unpleasant detail, I think I'll take a stroll on my own account and look things over at the scene of operations. How long will you errand take?"

About forty minutes, there and back.

"How long will it take me to reach St. Joseph's?"

Only about ten or fifteen minutes, it's not very far from here.

"Good enough. I'll slip out after you're gone and time myself to arrive back after your return. You'll know who it is when you hear a soft tap-tap-tap on the door. Rex demonstrated, tapping out the signal so that she would remember it."

"Very well. But do be careful, won't you?"

"I'll take care not to arouse any official interest in my movements; don't worry about that!"

"In the meantime, then, Auf Wiedersehen!" she responded, preparing to depart and giving Rex brief but clear directions on how to reach his destination by the shortest and quickest route, after which she left upon her own distasteful errand to police headquarters.

"Did you find it all right?" Olga greeted him about an hour later, admitting Munroe in response to the pre-arranged signal.

"No trouble at all. And how were the 'jacks' you went to see; anything suspicious in their attitude?"

"None whatever."

"So far, so good!" her guest murmured, following his hostess into the living room of the apartment and sitting beside her on the Chesterfield.

"You were quite right about the observation part of it," he confirmed. "The house is being watched all right!"

"Have any idea why they are doing so?"

"I think it's a very subtle trap, and quite in keeping with the Machiavellian ways," Rex thoughtfully commented, continuing after a momentary silence with the remark: "Munroe thinks the Gestapo are in hopes, now you are not being watched yourself, that if there is anything of value in the house you or your friends will try to recover it. I wonder!" he muttered, turning his head so as to look his companion squarely in the face. "If by some unfortunate chance they can have learned about those damn documents?"

"It is always possible — of course," she agreed, returning his gaze with one of sudden apprehension as she said: "In that case, I think we had better forget all about them, and the picture too!"

"Nothing doing!" came the prompt retort from her companion. "Leave the 'loot' behind us and sink off to the night like a couple of Arabs folding their tent, and without so much as an effort to recover the spoils?"

"Not 'ruddy' likely, pardon my crimson oath; not if I know it!" with a pugnacious tilt to his determined chin.

"I don't like the idea of abandoning everything any more than you do, but if we fail—" "I shudder to think of the consequences!"

"It's going to be a nasty bit of work," Munroe agreed, unconsciously dropping his hand on her arm in a gesture of encouragement. "But I think we can make it, watchers or no watchers!"

"If you insist, there isn't anything I can do about it, I suppose," Olga murmured, obviously reluctant to entertain the idea in face of the possibility that the Gestapo were expecting such a move. "However, you can at least lessen the after risks by forgetting the painting," she begged him.

"That will be a dangerous burden and might lead to capture later on and as it is my property, you can at least respect my wishes with regard to that item."

"Ever hear that little proverb: 'might as well be hung for a sheep as a lamb'?" Rex parried. "Besides, what in the world is the use of getting you out of Germany unless you have something to convert into money to replace your present income elsewhere?"

"I also happen to know that the financial position is pretty desperate with your sister and brother-in-law, so the painting is an essential item if you are all going to keep on eating and not starve to death in cosmopolitan Brussels!"

"Very well. Since you are bent upon an all-or-nothing gamble," Olga replied with equal determination. "It must be distinctly understood that you will accept one quarter of the value of the picture if we succeed and can sell it afterwards."

"Your sister was one jump ahead of you and proposed giving me one-third. That was the arrangement before I left Brussels," Munroe countered, flashing a peculiar sideways glance at his companion.

"Oh, I see!" she murmured slowly.

"I think it's a very subtle trap, and quite in keeping with the Machiavellian ways," Rex thoughtfully commented, continuing after a momentary silence with the remark: "Munroe thinks the Gestapo are in hopes, now

"So my 'night in shining armour' is merely an adventurer whose services may be had for hire, pay or gain, and that is why the 'loot,' as you described the painting, is so all important!"

"I never contradicted a lady," Rex grunted with a chuckle of amusement at Munroe's Olga, vainly trying to fathom the half-mocking smile which slowly flickered over his inscrutable features, "and so long as that is your opinion we'll let it go at that."

"Did my sister also approve of this man-and-wife idea of yours?"

"I'm afraid I forgot to mention it," he confessed, waving a hand in nonchalant dismissal of the whole thing as a mere minor detail. "But they'll forgive me after it's all over," he reassured her, "especially if we are successful and you rejoin them safe and sound."

"Quite a psychologist, aren't you, Mr. Munroe?"

"You don't know the half of it, my dear girl; however, does it make any difference?"

"No! I'm not a quitter, and since I've agreed I'll go through with it, irrespective of whether things turn out bitter-sweet—or otherwise!"

"Once again: I salute you! And now that's settled," he laughed quietly, like a schoolboy who's just escaped being caught in an act of mischief, "let's get on with the matter in hand. First of all, do you know if any of these keys Felix gave me will open the little postern gate, set in the high wall at the rear of the house?"

"Yes," came the prompt reply, "this is the one," taking the bunch of keys Rex held out for her inspection.

"It's a peculiar shape, as you can see for yourself."

"That disposes of how we get into the grounds," he thanked her. "Now let's pick out the key to the back door, and do you recollect if it has any bolts on the inside?"

"No. It's a massive solid oak affair fitted with a double mortice lock instead, and opens with this extra large key here," indicating a ponderous example of the locksmith's art in the bunch which Rex had given her.

"Fair enough!" he exclaimed, well satisfied with the solution of their entrance problems. "That opens up the avenue of approach completely. By the way, can you ride a bicycle and paddle a canoe?"

"Of course I can ride a bicycle! Nearly everyone does on the continent. Paddling a canoe is a bit tricky and is something I have only tried a few times. Still, if it isn't essential that I be an expert I could probably manage it well enough. But why bicycles and canoes, where on earth do they fit into the scheme of things?"

"I hope to lay a 'blind' trail and give our friends the notion you escaped down the river into Hungary," Munroe replied, explaining for her benefit the advantages of drawing a 'red herring' across their true line of retreat from the country. "However," he continued, "the bicycles will provide our real mode of exit the other way, although I only intend to use them for that purpose as far as the nearest railroad junction. From there we'll pick up the Ostend Express and continue of journey by rail. Incidentally, which would be the most convenient station to reach from here?"

"We could 'cycle to Wells, then go by local from Wells to Passau on the old Austria frontier," Olga suggested, regarding her companion with a look of keen interest as she awaited further disclosures regarding his plans.

"The express stops at the latter place and Wells is only about a hundred and forty kilometers from here," she continued, "and although things will be in a regular turmoil throughout Germany during the next few days, that will really be to our advantage, as we shall apparently be a couple of American tourists racing to board a ship for the States, thereby fitting quite naturally into the general confusion on every hand."

"You have certainly thought things out very cleverly," Olga commented him, "and your conclusions, after one considers them carefully, seem sound enough. What I am so nervous about is the long journey across Germany, especially with the contraband before leaving here. Provided we do recover the picture," she added, puffing lightly on her cigarette, "how do you intend to transport it? We can't take it along in its present frame, that's obvious!"

"There is no doubt, no possible doubt, no possible shadow of doubt," came in a chant of good humored repartees, "that we British are an exclusive race. And why shouldn't we be," he continued teasingly, "what England does to-day the rest of the world will do to-morrow."

"If I had any previous doubts about your nationality, my friend, that little touch of English insularity would completely dispel it just as surely as your innate Gilbert and Sullivan quotation confirms it!"

"In order to keep peace in the family, my little friend, I'll prove I do know my metes, even if we don't adopt the bally method," Rex chuckled. "At approximately three-fifths of a mile to a kilometer it's about eighty-five miles to Wells which, incidentally makes just a nice little jaunt via the peddle route, especially on a tandem!"

"Quite mad!" Olga rejoined with a roguish twinkle in her eyes, "just like all the other Englishmen I've had the misfortune to meet. But I wouldn't have you any different," she added, a frank smile of merriment robbing her remark of any offense. "It made me proud I was half British myself after I really knew and understood them."

"You'll make an Englishwoman Britanna will welcome with open arms," Munroe complimented, "but, to continue, I think my previous suggestion re our mode of exit a very good one, don't you?"

"I was wondering if we couldn't go down the river during the night, instead of attempting the other route?" came the astute counter-proposal.

"Once in Budapest we shouldn't have any trouble continuing to Belgrade," she pointed out, "and from there it would be easy to cross to Italy, then through France, and on to Belgium."

"I don't want, any part of Hungary or Italy at present," her companion objected, lighting and puffing steadily at his pipe for a few moments.

"In fact, I'm not keen on Jugo-Slavia if we break out suddenly," holding the match or Olga to light a cigarette, etc. "The entire tribe of Balkanites might immediately chuck in with 'Jerry' you know, and then we'd be out of the frying pan into the fire with a vengeance. We dare not apply for visas to those countries here in Vienna, and to crash them with out any is asking for trouble. If we did," he warned her, "we might very easily find ourselves partaking of the rather dubious hospitality in one of their filthy jails, and that would be disastrous in more ways than one."

"But the alternative seems so despicable we'll be carrying if we're accurate," she urged. "To be in any other country, even in Germany, would be safer for me than Vienna."

Canadians Pause During Manoeuvres

down the river into Hungary," Munroe replied, explaining for her benefit the advantages of drawing a 'red herring' across their true line of retreat from the country. "However," he continued, "the bicycles will provide our real mode of exit the other way, although I only intend to use them for that purpose as far as the nearest railroad junction. From there we'll pick up the Ostend Express and continue of journey by rail. Incidentally, which would be the most convenient station to reach from here?"

"We could 'cycle to Wells, then go by local from Wells to Passau on the old Austria frontier," Olga suggested, regarding her companion with a look of keen interest as she awaited further disclosures regarding his plans.

"The express stops at the latter place and Wells is only about a hundred and forty kilometers from here," she continued, "and although things will be in a regular turmoil throughout Germany during the next few days, that will really be to our advantage, as we shall apparently be a couple of American tourists racing to board a ship for the States, thereby fitting quite naturally into the general confusion on every hand."

"You have certainly thought things out very cleverly," Olga commented him, "and your conclusions, after one considers them carefully, seem sound enough. What I am so nervous about is the long journey across Germany, especially with the contraband before leaving here. Provided we do recover the picture," she added, puffing lightly on her cigarette, "how do you intend to transport it? We can't take it along in its present frame, that's obvious!"

"There is no doubt, no possible doubt, no possible shadow of doubt," came in a chant of good humored repartees, "that we British are an exclusive race. And why shouldn't we be," he continued teasingly, "what England does to-day the rest of the world will do to-morrow."

"If I had any previous doubts about your nationality, my friend, that little touch of English insularity would completely dispel it just as surely as your innate Gilbert and Sullivan quotation confirms it!"

"In order to keep peace in the family, my little friend, I'll prove I do know my metes, even if we don't adopt the bally method," Rex chuckled. "At approximately three-fifths of a mile to a kilometer it's about eighty-five miles to Wells which, incidentally makes just a nice little jaunt via the peddle route, especially on a tandem!"

"Quite mad!" Olga rejoined with a roguish twinkle in her eyes, "just like all the other Englishmen I've had the misfortune to meet. But I wouldn't have you any different," she added, a frank smile of merriment robbing her remark of any offense. "It made me proud I was half British myself after I really knew and understood them."

FIRST CANADIAN FORT IS REBUILT

Nova Scotia went back more than 300 years for the plans which were used in reconstructing the Port Royal Habitation, which housed the first Europeans to settle in America north of the Gulf of Mexico — and which was recently opened to the public by the Hon. T. A. Cresser, Minister of Mines and Resources. That famous fort, where Champlain instituted the Order of the Good Time, stands today as it did when hardy French explorers made it their headquarters in 1605.

The rambling log buildings, as much like the original as human ingenuity could make them, are the product of Nova Scotia craftsmen. Hand-hewn beams and floor boards are pegged into position; wrought-iron hinges hold the doors and solid shutters in place, and other hand-worked iron is used for bars on the windows and decorative work.

If it is possible for one place to be "more historic" than another, this one can be described only in superlatives. DeMonts and Champlain arrived in Annapolis Basin in 1604 and named it Port Royal. The Port built in the following year was the scene of battle after battle between the French and English and had actually changed hands eight times before 1710 when it was captured by a strong expedition of New England troops from Boston. The name was changed to Annapolis Royal in honor of Queen Anne who then occupied the English throne.

The reconstruction of the ancient habitation at Annapolis Royal — to give it its modern name — has attracted wide attention in Canada and the United States. Many individuals and organizations have donated old records, furnishings and other articles to lend to the authenticity of this famous site, 30 miles from Digby by Dominion Atlantic Railway. Digby is the western terminus of the line, and the connection with Saint John, N.B., being maintained by the S.S. Princess Helene. Other famous military structures still standing at Annapolis Royal include the ramparts of Fort Anne. The park, 23 acres in extent, includes a later French fort completed in 1707 and captured in 1710, and the officers' quarters erected by the British a few years later. Layout shows the Port Royal Habitation; the wall house, and a view showing the care with which the hand-hewn beams were put in place.

"FLATTENED" FISH Means More Food for Britains

Fish which has been flattened and dried so that it looks like a piece of cardboard is Britain's latest device for economizing in shipping space.

It is a modern version of stockfish, which in Tudor times was exported in huge quantities from Scotland to the Catholic countries of Europe. The Spanish Armada, sailing in 1588 on its abortive attempt to invade England, carried 8,000 quintals of stock fish to feed its crews.

By the modern method, which is applied to ling and cod, much of it from Newfoundland, the fish is sliced open and the inside removed. Then by special vacuum process, the water is drained out until the fish is only one-third its original bulk. Packaged in salt it will then keep for many weeks.

Although it does not look particularly appetizing in this form, a soaking in warm water brings it back to its original freshness. It is then boiled, fried or grilled according to taste.

re-lighting his still burning pipe. "That's a splendid idea!" his confederate agreed, "and it will be quite easy to buy one suitable for the purpose. Fortunately, I have a fairly large sum of money on hand; so although it will be an additional expense when coupled to the cost of the two bicycles, boat hire and our fares to Brussels, I think I shall have sufficient to see us through all right."

"In that case, we are well off financially," Rex assured her, "because I started from London with twenty-five pounds of my own and also collected ten thousand Belgian francs—another sixty-five pounds—from your relatives in Brussels. Deducting my expenses so far, I have between sixty-five and seventy pounds left; so tomorrow I'll convert the lot into marks and hold them for reserve for emergencies. It will be better to use the money you have in German marks to meet current expenses, I think, as they will be subject to such a heavy discount afterwards."

"There is a huge market here where you can pick up almost anything we need," Olga volunteered, in complete accord with Munroe's suggestion to use her funds and conserve their foreign exchange. "I think we can save quite a bit too by buying second-hand outfits, don't you think so?"

"Bright girl!" As a matter of fact, a used bag would be better than a new one; and while you are at it you might see what you can find in the way of a pair of cheap rucksacks, unless you have a couple," he added quickly, "have you?"

"No, I haven't," his accomplice confessed after carefully thinking over his request. "The only fitting equipment I can produce is really cycling kit, socks, shorts, a sports sweater and cap, etc."

"We shall need those as well, so you had better dig them out. They will render us less conspicuous when riding the bikes and, after all, we might as well look the part to perfection," Munroe smiled, thinking what an attractive picture his companion would look in such a rig-out.

"If a part is worth playing at all," he concluded, "it's worth doing right, that's always been my motto."

"What about an outfit for yourself? That will have to be bought, too, I suppose?"

"Do you want me to get them?" she asked him.

"Yes, and the bicycles at the same time."

"No, I think I had better look after those purchases, as I don't want you linked to the bicycles in any way. Otherwise, when the hue and cry begins, it might give the Gestapo a lead."

"In that case, there is a very good shop not far from the main tourist office, where you will find such merchandise and all the necessary kits besides. They also speak English there, so you won't have any language difficulties," his companion prompted, meticulously describing the exact location of the sporting establishment.

"Okay, I'll get what I need from that place, and two suitable machines besides," advising her that the next step would be to plant the machines, golf bag and rucksacks filled with the cycling outfits, somewhere near Vienna. "It must be where we can easily pick the lot up after the raid, and a private place if at all possible. Can you think of a good spot for the purpose?" he queried, rising and emptying the ash-tray they were using, as Olga arose and began to pace backward and forward in an attitude of thoughtful mien.

"My old nurse has a small cottage in a wooded section just outside the village of Spelsing," Miss Mueller suggested after a few turns up and down the room. "There is a convenient out-house where everything would be quite safe and, fortunately for us, she is stone deaf and couldn't hear anything. The old lady isn't at home during the day either," a sudden recollection flashing quickly through her mind.

"Yes, Nancy spends her time with a married daughter in the village most afternoons. But it's two or three miles from here," the girl concluded ruefully, "and in the opposite direction from the way in which we have to go."

"No matter; it's just what we want," Rex assured her, standing with his back to the mantel, while his partner continued walking up and down. "Luck certainly seems to be with us, up to now at any rate," evidently quite satisfied that the place at Spelsing would fulfil their requirements all right.

"When do you intend to attempt recovery of the documents and the pictures?"

"Tomorrow night, all being well."

"One more day before the die is cast," Olga murmured in low tones, frankly admiring the nonchalance of her partner in conspiracy, standing coolly at ease with both hands thrust carelessly in his trousers pockets.

After a moment in which she bravely attempted to match Munroe's complete sang-froid, the young woman laughed quietly, and with equal confidence assurance said: "How about some tea, dear boy? We've been talking nearly all afternoon and I'm dying for a bite to eat. What about you?"

"By all means!" Rex seconded the motion. "Now you mention it, I could do justice to a wee spot of refreshment myself!"

"CALLING ALL CARS"

Save Gasoline

A NATIONAL EMERGENCY

Canada is right up against an acute shortage of gasoline and fuel oil. Tankers that normally supply our country have been commandeered for vitally important overseas service.

The Commonwealth Air Training Plan, the rapid development of Canada's mechanized army units and the great work carried on by our corvettes make the demand for fuel urgent.

Our crude oil intake is limited. There is just one thing to do if our fighting forces are to carry on with a "full tank". Every Canadian motorist is asked to cut his daily gas consumption in half!

There are many ways by which this 50% saving can be made . . . ways and means to give you more mileage per gallon. You can drive slower so that you will use less gasoline. You can go fifty-fifty with your neighbours, inviting each other to share cars . . . for business, and for pleasure. People can readily go to and from work together, using one car instead of four . . . using one gallon of gasoline instead of several. Women as well as men can make these savings.

The amount of gasoline used in Canada for business, social and non-essential activities is amazingly high in proportion to that used by our fighting forces. One look at the figures would convince you that this situation must be reversed.

Canada does not ask or request you to put your car up. She merely asks for your help . . . asks that you walk sometimes when the distance isn't too great . . .

that you take a shorter drive on Sunday afternoon . . . that you look after your car and keep it in good condition . . . that you say to your neighbour: "Let's use my car today, Jim! We'll use yours tomorrow."

Every day, in greater and greater quantity, we must release gasoline and oil by the thousands of gallons to our throbbing munitions plants . . . to our tanks and armoured cars . . . to our fighting planes and bombers . . . to our corvettes and merchant ships that ply the vital sea-lanes . . . so that the day of victory may sooner be at hand.

Will YOU help?

It is also vitally important that you reduce the use of domestic and commercial fuel oil.

17 easy ways towards a 50% GASOLINE SAVING

(Approved by Automobile Experts)

Reduce driving speed from 60 to 40 on the open road.

Avoid kick-rabbit starts.

Avoid useless or non-essential driving.

Turn motor off when not in use, do not leave idling.

Don't race your engine! Let it warm up slowly.

Don't strain your engine! Change gears.

Keep carburetor cleaned and properly adjusted.

Tune up motor, timing, etc.

Keep spark plugs and valves clean.

Check cooling system; overheating wastes gasoline.

Maintain tires at right pressure.

Lubricate efficiently; worn engines waste gasoline.

Drive in groups to and from work, using cars alternate days.

For golf, picnics and other outings, use one car instead of four.

Take those short shopping trips ON FOOT and carry parcels home.

Walk to and from the movies.

Root owners, too, can help by reducing speed.

Your regular service station man will gladly explain these and other ways of saving gasoline. Consult him.

Flight Lieutenant Richard H. Hilary, R.A.F. pilot assigned to duty in Washington, arrives at New York from London. Shot down in a fight with Nazi airmen over the English Channel, Hilary's face was so badly burned plastic surgery was needed to give him new eyelids and a whole upper lip, grafted from the skin of his arm.

"Heaven" At The Elite

The combined attraction of Betty Davis and Charles Boyer as a co-acting team, plus the fact that this show is based on a widely-read novel, should be sufficient to make you want to see "All This and Heaven Too".

The acknowledged First Lady of the screen—Betty Davis is teamed for the first time with the incomparable Charles Boyer. Primarily a woman's picture, it will still attract seekers of mugs of rugged entertainment. Betty Davis' portrayal ranges with her best, her terrific Theopile pace taken in stride by Charles Boyer and the supporting cast.

See this show at the Elite Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 24th, 25th, and 26th.

The DIAL REVIEW by Walter Davis

With the broadcast of the film smash-hit, "Algiers," starring Charles Boyer and Hedy Lamarr, "Lux Radio Theatre" closed its doors for the rest of the summer—but don't feel too badly about it, the curtain will rise again on Monday, September 8th at 8 o'clock. In our opinion it is difficult to think of any other program that has as consistently varied a repertoire as the "Lux Radio Theatre."

Snootin' through the Studios—Creating theme music and signature melodies is as easy breathing for Billy Mella, musical director of the "Hap Hazard" series, currently replacing the "Fibber McGee & Molly" shows for the summer. When only a freshman at the U. of Michigan he wrote the college's annual opera. Rumour has it that Don Ameche is bringing along his personal violinist when he joins the Kraft Music Hall cast July 31st. Don uses the fiddler to keep him on key when he sings. The violinist plays alongside Ameche's ear during the vocal—A cheerful note for CICA's listeners is that Henry Aldrich of the "Aldrich Family" will continue to be heard even though he has been called to the U.S. Army. Arrangements have been made whereby Henry can continue to appear before the mike to bring you his escapades.

If you want to annoy Reinhold Schmidt, bass-director of the chorus of the "Carnation Contented" chorus, just talk about any artistic "gift." The muses don't give gifts," insists Reinhold, "It's 10 per cent inspiration and 90 per cent good, hard work!" Possibly that other 2 1/2 per cent is being just plain annoyed.

Dr. Harry Hagen and his popular "True or False" program is still one of the light spots for anyone's listening on Tuesday nights at 9:30. "True or False" has a new sponsor beginning last week, but the style of the program hasn't changed—so be sure that you don't miss "True or False" to see how your I.Q. measures up with that of the contestants—it always makes you feel pretty good if you happen to know more than they do!

The "Ninety-Niners" are now presenting a new program—"The 99 Summer Show", featuring Allan Roth and his orchestra with Ray Bloch and his "Swing Fourteen." For those of you who like the unusual in musical fare, here is a program that will really appeal. Roth has his own distinct stylings that make an old number appear new without taking away the appeal of the number. The arrangements of the vocals carried by the "Swing Fourteen" will make you sit up and take notice. Listen every Monday and Friday evenings at 9:45 and see just how enjoyable this program is.

Summer vacations are in full swing at CICA—Alta Magoon is enjoying the sea breezes at the Pacific coast and visiting with ex-CICAites Norman Botterill, Stuart McKay and Norrie McKenna. Jim Allard has headed for Pigeon Lake to cool off and relax. Bob Keith has just returned from a skiing trip in the Columbia ice fields—think of skiing in this weather!

To close this column I'm putting in a plug for myself—but seriously, if you would like to see what makes radio tick, I would suggest that you listen to "Meet the Staff" every Saturday morning at 11:45. In conducting these quizzes of the staff members even I am learning about the business—and that's quite an admission! See you again next week!
